Bathrooms With Spectacular City Views Are Redefining Luxury Living

October 10, 2018 by Michelle Sinclair Colman

Residential buildings in New York City try to outdo one another with outrageous amenities but not all of them have the views or space to offer lush soaking tubs with incredible floor-to-ceiling city vistas. Those that do, really stand above the rest.

New high-floored, high-end developments are redefining luxury living by offering residents windowed master baths with spectacular views that provide the perfect, tranquil setting to relax.

252 East 57th Street

NYC's ultra-luxury condominium tower 252 East 57th Street is home to a beautifully designed penthouse by AD100 interior architect, Daniel Romualdez. Listed for $29.75 million the 6-bed, 7-bath home consumes the entire 65th floor and has a custom-designed bathtub that punctuates the master bathroom. Luxuriously appointed, the master bathroom has stunning views through oversize windows and provides views of Manhattan, the East River and more.
